The main aim of the state is the public management of economic activity that would conform to the grounds of social justice and the creation of equal opportunities for every person and the governmental protection of those who are illegally oppressed in the competitive conditions of the market. These grounds reflect the essence and the content of social changes of the epochs. The author points out that social progress, peace, and consolidation depend on complying the principals of social justice and independence in all the spheres of social life. It is stated that market relations are inseparable from economic independence of the citizen, which gives opportunities for constant improving of quality and the level of life for people. It is proved that current demands of market economy have three main criteria of social justice, peace and freedom: abolition of privileges; establishment of new principles of distributing of the income and wealth; protection of economic rights and freedoms of the person. Limits differentiating citizens' income and quality of life public to be defined.

As unfair differentiation of income raises political problems, social and property polarization of people, which impairs moral and psychological mood in the society, causes wars and the fight of social groups.
